Glimmerant's Movie Ranking System

GMRS

Version 2.0 | Created June 28, 2026

1 Level 1: Terrible

The movie does not work on almost any level. The story is hard to follow, the pacing drags or rushes for no reason, and the acting feels flat or forced. Watching it feels like a chore.

KEY TRAITS Confusing plot, weak acting, no clear purpose

2 Level 2: Bad

The movie has a few moments that work, maybe a decent scene or a single strong performance, but the overall result is disappointing. It often feels unfinished or poorly thought through.

KEY TRAITS Some good ideas, poor execution

3 Level 3: Average

The movie is watchable but forgettable. It is not painful to sit through, and it might entertain in the moment, but it does not bring anything new or memorable to the table.

KEY TRAITS Passable, predictable, easy to forget

4 Level 4: Good

The movie is well made and holds together. The direction is confident, the performances are solid, and the story makes sense. It is the kind of movie people are happy to recommend.

KEY TRAITS Solid craft, enjoyable, well acted

5 Level 5: Great

The movie goes beyond competent and becomes genuinely excellent. The storytelling, direction, and performances all come together. It leaves a real impression after the credits roll.

KEY TRAITS Strong storytelling, memorable, well crafted

6 Level 6: Masterpiece

The movie changes how people think about film. It is original, deeply influential, and still talked about years later. These are the movies held up as the standard for the art form.

KEY TRAITS Groundbreaking, timeless, widely influential

GMRS V2.0 expands the original six level scale with clearer traits for each tier.
